History of Bratislava

History:

Bratislava is geographically situated in Slovakia's south-western part, bordering Austria and Hungary. The city is well within the center of Europe, with bodies of river flowing across. The Danube River and Morava River runs a path through the city. The Carpathian mountain range and some rolling hills create a holistic view of the city. Bratislava is the 2nd largest city in Slovakia. Its location is close to other city capitals with only 65km from Vienna, 196km from Budapest and 324km from Prague. After the fall of the Great Moravian Empire, Slovakia became part of the Kingdom of Hungary from the 10th century until the end of the First World War when the Treaty of Trianon created Czechoslovakia, a country which Slovaks are widely proud of - for example, some Czechoslovakian representatives, such as Alexander Dubček and Gustáv Husák, were ethnically Slovak. Between 1939 and 1944, Slovakia was a German-controlled state. Then, it was conquered by the Soviets to recreate a new Czechoslovakia, but one that would be pro-Soviet and Communist this time. This lasted until the fall of Communist rule in Czechoslovakia, during the Velvet Revolution of 1989. In 1993, peaceful differences between Czechs and Slovaks when rebuilding their nation after the fall of Communism led to the dissolution of Czechoslovakia into two separate and independent nations: the Czech Republic, and of course Slovakia (Slovak Republic). To this day, Slovaks and Czechs have generally friendly relations, and the two nations cooperate together frequently on international issues. Bratislava was the capital (1536-1784), the coronation city (1563-1830) and the seat of the diet (1536-1848) of the Kingdom of Hungary for many years. Since 1960, it has been the capital of the federal state of Slovakia within Czechoslovakia and, since 1993, it has been the capital of independent Slovakia. Although today, Bratislava's population are mostly Slovaks, from the 13th to the early 19th century, the majority ethnic group in the city were the Germans, who remained the largest ethnic group until the First World War (in 1910, 42% were German, 41% Hungarian and 15% Slovak out of a total population of 78,000). Hungarians formed another important group in the city in the 19th century, but after the First World War, many Germans and Hungarians left for Austria and Hungary respectively, and the remaining Germans were expelled at the end of World War II.

How to get to Bratislava

By Air:

The Bratislava Milan Rastislav Štefánik Airport is the largest in the Slovak Republic. Direct bus services operating in approximately hourly intervals connect the airport with Vienna airport and the city of Vienna. Be aware that the staff might take some regulations especially seriously. For example, you will not be allowed a small handbag/laptop bag and hand luggage. If you are flying by Ryanair and have check-in luggage, do not let the small size of the airport fool you. Arrive at the airport well in advance of your flight, as the queue can get very long.

Vienna International Airport is located 40 km (25 mi) from Bratislava, near to the town of Schwechat in Austria, after which the airport is named. The airport is the home base of the flag-carrier Austrian and the budget airline Fly Niki. Most European airlines and a significant number of international airlines have direct connections to Vienna from their respective hubs. A quick summary of transport options:

Blaguss (Bus). 13 buses a day between Vienna Airport and Bratislava city centre. The buses alight at the bus terminal under the New Bridge and continue towards Bratislava Airport. €7.20.

Postbus/Slovak Lines (Bus). Bus run almost every hour between Sudtiroler Platz and Vienna Airport and Bratislava Bus Station, some buses run as far as Bratislava Airport. Please check the timetable. You are allowed to transport two pieces of baggage per person at €1.00 per piece. The baggage tags can be purchased from ticket window or from the driver. It is possible to buy tickets online or at a driver. They speak (or understand) English. €7.70, €4.30 return.

Train. Unfortunately, trains from Vienna to Bratislava do not stop at Vienna airport. However, there is a direct connection between both central train stations. It is possible to take the train (S7 or RSB7) from Vienna Airport to Wolfsthal on the Austrian border (45 minutes, cheapest ticket is 3 VOR-Zone for €5.40) and change to Slovak-operated regional bus 901 [21] that will take you to Bratislava city center (€1.50, €0.75 for under 26 years of age, children under 6 travel free) in just 15 minutes. The buses leave at 55 minutes past the hour, but be aware that the departures/arrivals of the bus are not always aligned with the trains so you run into risk of up to two hours of waiting in a small village 5 km from the border. Also note that the bus 901 does not stop at the railway station, the bus stop is at the main road (Hauptstraße 40) approximately 300 m away. Walking to Bratislava from here will take an hour and is not recommended though there is a path near the Danube. All in all, this is not a preferable way to get to Bratislava, but could be useful if schedules have been checked or if you have a back-up plan to arrange a ride or taxi (which can be hard to explain if you don't speak Slovak or German) from Wolfsthal.

Taxi. Cab Fare could be anywhere from 45 Euro to 145 Euro, depending on where you are going to in Bratislava and the Taxi Company you are hiring. It is very reasonable to book transportation in advance from a Private hire, which will lower your costs significantly and improve your comfort, because driver will wait for you directly at the Schwechat arriving hall.

How to get from the Bratislava Airport to the Hotel

By Car:

The Airport is located in the eastern part of the capital city of Bratislava with a direct link to the D1 motorway by-pass. From the airport, get on E571/E58/E75 highway and drive towards Petržalka. Then take the D2/Route 61 exit from E571/E58/E75. Take most SNP, Staromestská and Kollárovo námestie to Hodžovo námestie in Bratislava.

Car Hire:

You will find the rental companies for car hire at Barcelona airport in both Terminal 1 and 2. The Car hire company in Terminal 2 is only in building T2B. Each of these companies is right next door to each other so you can be sure of cheap car rental prices. You can try arranging your car rental directly with the companies but often internet based reservation services can give you a better price as they have negotiated discounts for bulk reservations.

More information about the rates and contact details:

By Public Transportation:

By bus

Bus No. 61 links Main Railway Station (Hlavnú železničnú stanicu) with the city centre in the direction from the Airport Bratislava and bus No. 96 in the direction to Petržalka, Prokofievova. Bus stop is located in front of Arrival Terminal.

Tickets' types and prices:

Bus drivers don't sell tickets in Bratislava so you need to get tickets in advance. Use the vending machines at the bus stop but note that you will need euro coins as the vending machines don't take notes (there are also two big red ticket machines in the terminal building close to arrivals, which accept banknotes). You can also buy tickets in the tourist and exchange offices in the terminal, but they have only limited working hours. Be aware that the airport shops and kiosks are not very helpful when it comes to changing bills into coins. A screen in the arrivals hall displays actual departure times of next public transport buses and buses to Vienna. Coach lines connect Bratislava with all of Slovakia, a high number of Czech cities and a number of EU destinations, including London, Paris and daily buses also depart to Budapest, Prague. The most frequent international coach connection by far is Vienna though, with two lines running almost every hour from Vienna's Sudtirolerplatz near Hauptbahnhof via Vienna International Airport: Blaguss has tickets sold by the driver priced at €7.20, with stops in central Bratislava and Bratislava Airport. Slovak Lines has buses that stop at the Coach Terminal and Bratislava Airport, for a cost of €7.70. The tickets can be purchased from the driver or booked online. A trip from/to Vienna takes 1½ hours.

By taxi

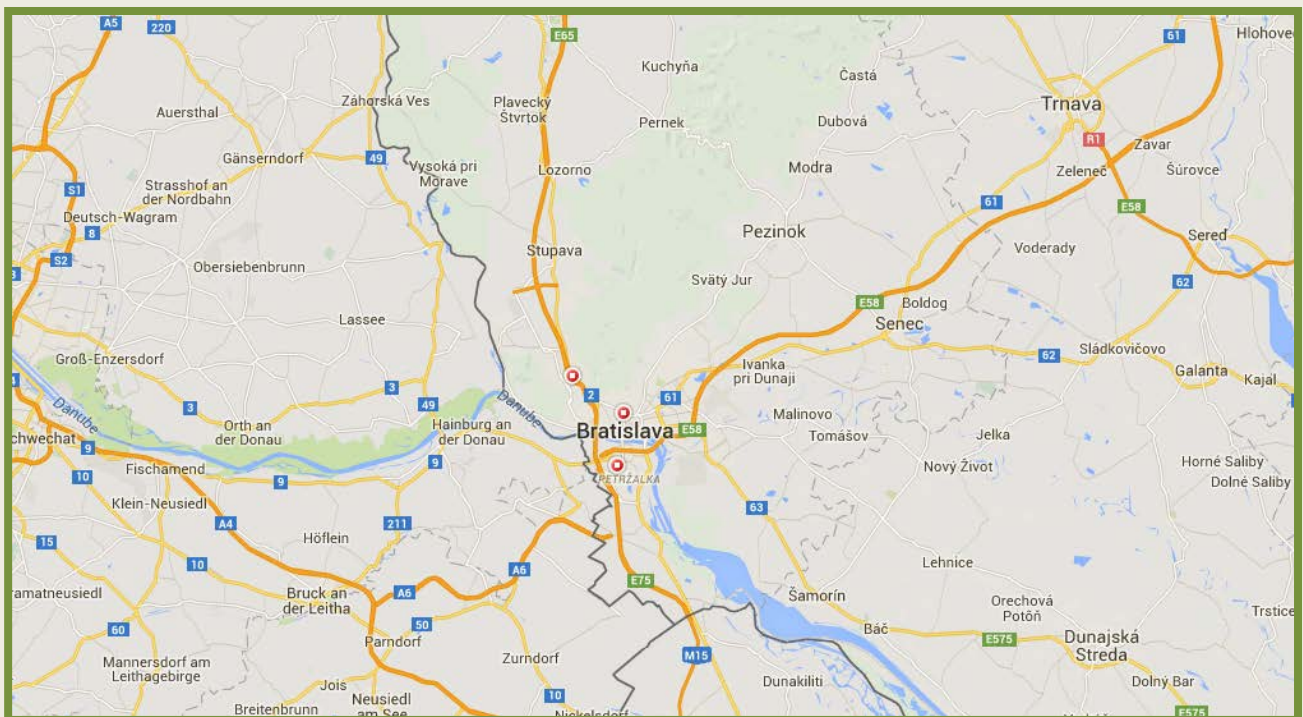

Taxis are inexpensive, usual price when ordering taxi by phone for whole 9km journey from airport to city centre should be not more than €10-15, if hailed on street expect double prices €20-30, always make sure taxi driver use taxi meter, if he refuses don't get in the taxi. Avoid unofficial black taxis which will overcharge you.

You book your taxi at: + 421 2 16 505, + 421 948 888 881, +421 2 16 916

By Train

You can get to the Main Railway Station from the Airport Bratislava by the public transport network (MHD) bus no. 61.

PLACES TO VISIT

Historical Museum-Bratislava Castle

Bratislava Castle or Hrad is located on a hill above the historical city centre, overlooking the River Danube. Initially a Roman frontier post, there has been a castle at this site since the 9th century. In 1881, it was reduced to rubble due to a fire and wasn't reconstructed until the mid 1900s. A large section was devoted to art – approximately 3500 paintings, statues, and prints by domestic and foreign artists grouped according to theme. Religious art in one room, painting and portraits of royalty such as Maria Theresa and Maria Antoinette in another, more portraits and finally, sculpture and modern art such as Julius Koller's question mark canvas. One of the highlighted displays was copies of 15th century altarpieces and church statues done by Paul of Levoča and many of his students. It is a 15-minute walk from the city centre or can be reached via public transport by taking trolleybus 203 or 207 from Hodžovo námestie.

Slovak National Theatre

Bratislava's opera house – known officially as the historical building of the Slovak National Theatre – is a Neo-Renaissance-style building opened in 1886 as the City Theatre, according to the design of Viennese architects F. Fellner and H. Helmer. The busts of famous musical composers appear in the oval openings in the facade, as well as a stone sculptural group, the Muse of Thalia, figures of children symbolising tragedy and comedy. Tilgner was the designer of the superb Ganymede's Fountain at the entrance to the theatre. The building is the seat of the Slovak National Theatre opera and ballet ensembles.

Primatial Palace

The Primatial Palace (1778-1781) was built on property originally belonging to the archbishop of Esztergom. The Treat of Bratislava between France and Austria was signed in the palace's Hall of Mirrors on 26 December, 1805. Today the palace is the office of the mayor of Bratislava, and the superb Hall of Mirrors is now used to host concerts. The palace also contains a rare collection of English tapestries from the 17th century. The exquisite fountain of St George, depicting the legendary knight slaying the dragon, stands in the square inner courtyard of the Primatial Palace. According to one legend the figure of St George represents the archbishop, and his fight with the dragon symbolises the efforts of the Catholic Church to banish the Reformation from the city. Legend has it that St George saved the virgin Dubravka from the dragon, and as a reward gained her hand in marriage.
